Halliwell's Filmgoer's Companion entry:

“French juvenile actress of the fifties.”

Video Movie Guide 1993 review of “JEUX INTERDITS”:

“It has been said that "FORBIDDEN GAMES" is to World War II what "GRAND ILLUSION" is to World War I. The horror of war has never been more real than as portrayed here against the bucolic surroundings of the French countryside. At the nucleus of the plot is Paulette, played by 5-year old Brigitte Fossey. Witnessing German troops kill her parents twists the girl who acquires an attraction for the symbols of death. A truly tragic, must-see work. In French with English subtitles. ***** ”

Excerpt from The Virgin Film Guide review of “JEUX INTERDITS”:

“..."FORBIDDEN GAMES" derives most of its power from Clément’s painstakingly methodical direction and the remarkable performances of the two child leads. Poujouly and the amazing five-year old Fossey are highly expressive actors who give this stunning film its emotional core...”
