Halliwell's Filmgoer's Companion entry:

"American child actress of the forties who seems not quite to have managed the transition to adult stardom."

Those Endearing Young Charms entry:

" Brown eyes and brown hair.
Ghislaine "Gigi" Perreau, the little girl with the heart-shaped face and bright responsive eyes, was born just six weeks after her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Perreau-Saussine, arrived in Los Angeles from France.

Soon after their arrival Mrs. Perreau took her son Gerald to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios at the request of an agent friend, while Gigi went along for the ride. It just so happened that the studio needed a little French girl to play in the forthcoming movie "MADAME CURIE". An agent spotted Gigi and felt that she would be perfect for the part. He introduced her to director Mervyn Leroy and in no time at all she was playing the part of Eve Curie as a child.

After her performance in Madame Curie, Gigi acted in over a half dozen films, but did not receive her first major role until she starred in "ENCHANTMENT" with her brother Gerald. Among her achievements was winning the Critics Award for "HAS ANYBODY SEEN MY GAL", 1952. During the fifties she also received the Parents Magazine juvenile Acting Award, the Milky Way Gold Star Award, and the Screen Children's Guild Small Fry Award."
